

This is what 35 years in real estate looks like.

Here at Lone Wolf, we've seen the industry transform—and so have we. To celebrate 35 years in business, we thought we'd look back on our journey so far.

The beginning

Lone Wolf Technologies—and real estate's first back office and accounting software—is born. Our founders, Lorne Wallace and Des O'Kelly, co-launch the company in Cambridge, ON, with the goal of creating simpler real estate tools for brokers and agents everywhere.

The investment

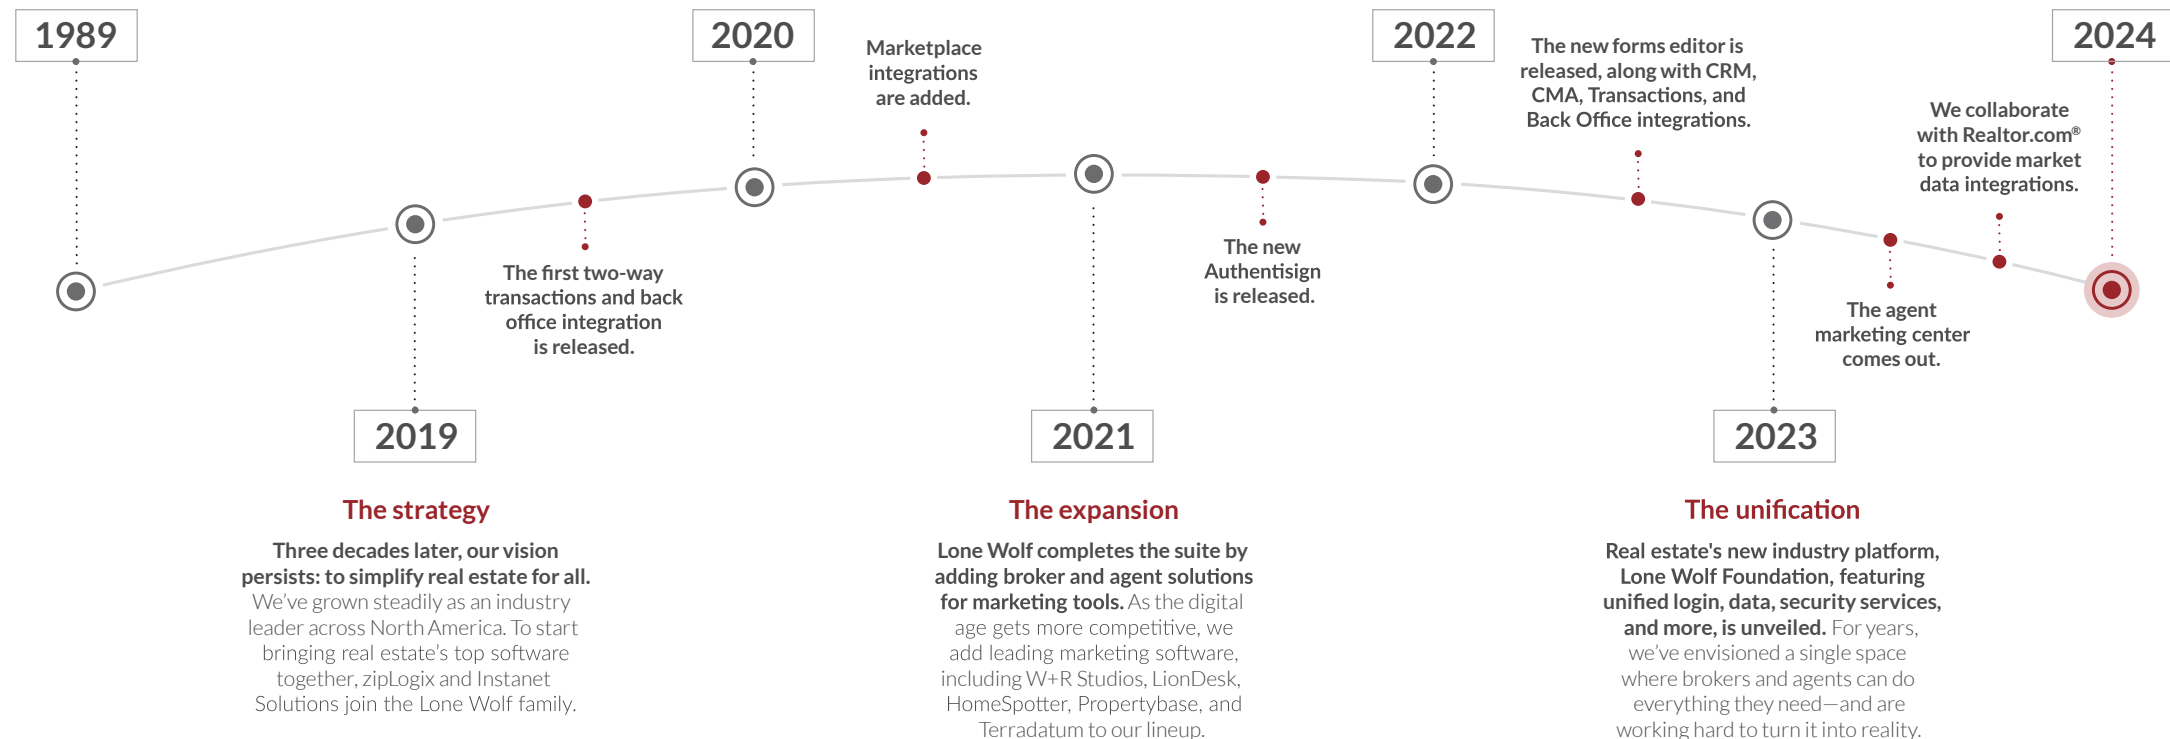

Stone Point Capital invests in Lone Wolf's massive expansion, innovation, and unification initiative. This makes it possible to plan for bigger and better changes to our products and offerings than ever before.

The innovation

Lone Wolf brings real estate's most complete software offering together and into the present. As we grow, we continuously make sure that our products are safe, secure, and easy to use.

The new generation

Now, 35 years later, the future of real estate tech begins again. From this year onward, we're entering a new era of innovation. It's time to break down the limits of real estate technology so far and create something stronger. For today, for tomorrow, and for the future.

We're just getting started.